

Thanks for downloading my preview – it means a lot to me.

Welcome to WaveHubTennis. The all-in-one sportsbetting school. My name is Markus and together with my Team we are educating sportsbettors on how to get profitable with data-backed sportsbetting. With over 5 Million $ staked (combined) and over 5 years of ATP experience, we have turned members into $10k+ / months, enabling to live

If you want to step up your game – please find my free course and paid membership here:

<https://whop.com/wavehubtennis>

IG: <https://www.instagram.com/wavehubtennis/>

YouTube: <https://www.youtube.com/@WaveHubTennis>

Again, thank you so much for downloading the preview, and please read my thoughts carefully, I have summarized all the Bets at the End. Make sure to follow us on Instagram, so that you don't miss any content.

Cheers, Markus

ATP Montreal Open Preview

Finally we are back at a 1000 points tournament, let's see what this will bring. I am already excited to play this one, as it is still far enough away from the US Open so a lot of high ranked players will be playing close to their best levels or at least with their best intentions. Let's dive into the quarters

Court Condition & Weather

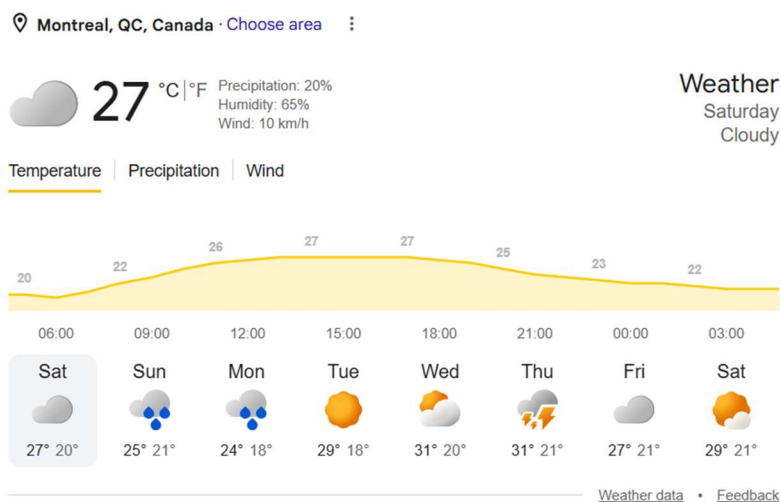

Based on last year's condition, the Canadian Open is one of the fastest Courts with a hold rate of 81.1%. Now keep that in mind, Good Servers with good Winner to unforced error ratio will have a big edge here. That is exactly the reason why Shelton was winning this one last year

Canadian Open 2025

Hard · 188m elevation

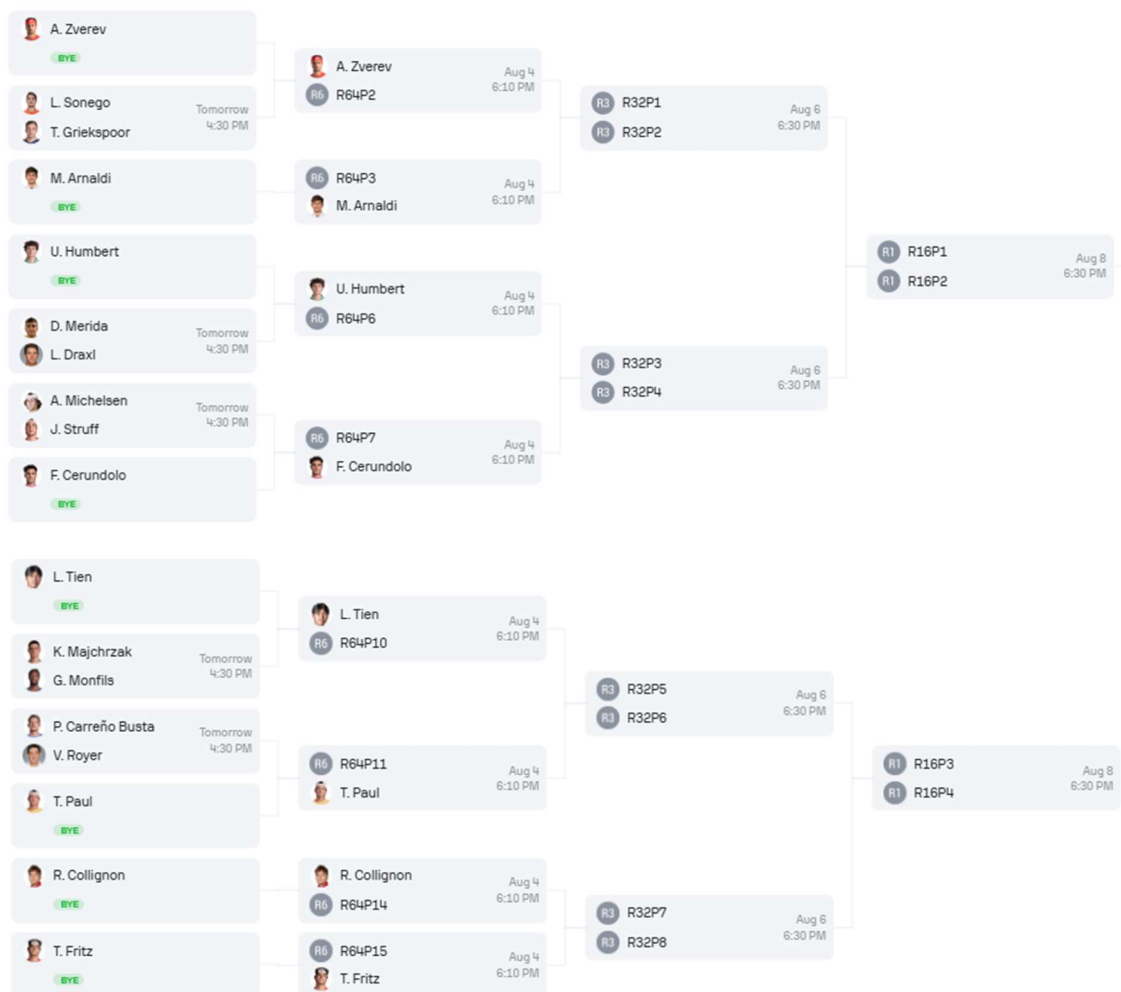

CPI	44.6 – Fast
Overall speed rating	Fast
Ace rate	11.2%
Rally length	3.7 shots
Air density (RAD)	0.953
Hold %	81.1%
Ball	Wilson
Champion	Shelton

Weather

The weather will be hot, with possible interruptions on Monday & Thursday

Q1 – Zverev / Fritz clear winners? Value spotted!

Favourite: Zverev, Fritz

Possible Dark Horse: Michelsen, Collignon

Performance in question: Paul

Player to defend Points: Zverev [SF], Fritz [SF]

Looking at the top draw of the first Quarter we can already see Zverev having no competition on reaching the QF, where he will most likely meet Fritz or an upset, but besides that, I see little value in outright odds. As Sinner, Alcaraz and Djokovic canceled the tournament, Zverev will be the top favourite to actually win Montreal and I think he will at least make a SF appearance here, as there is not really competition to challenge him.

In general, not really an exciting quarter, the spots I will probably take based on the data that I will get, is Michelsen to win against Humbert in Round 3; worth taking around 1.8 (Calculated with my Model, available here). Michelsen has had way more preparation as Humbert, their last H2H in Indian Wells was close, but I am sure, that based on recent performances he will have an easier time against Humbert. So if we can that matchup, and a price around that, I'm happy to take it.

I would really like to fade Tien here early, but I see no one that is up for the challenge that I want to trust, especially not Paul in these conditions.

Besides that, this will be a quarter to watch an bet on live.

LETZTE SPIELE: HUMBERT U.
31.07.26	WAS	Humbert U.	1
		Shelton B.	2
28.07.26	WAS	Humbert U.	2
		Martin A.	0
25.03.26	MIA	Humbert U.	0
		Cerúndolo F.	2
23.03.26	MIA	Shevchenko A.	0
		Humbert U.	2
21.03.26	MIA	Diallo G.	0
		Humbert U.	2
Zeige mehr Spiele ✓
LETZTE SPIELE: MICHELSEN A.
31.07.26	WAS	Fritz T.	2
		Michelsen A.	1
30.07.26	WAS	Michelsen A.	2
		Mannarino A.	0
28.07.26	WAS	Michelsen A.	2
		McDonald M.	0
26.07.26	BLO	Michelsen A.	2
		Fearnley J.	0
25.07.26	BLO	Michelsen A.	2
		Suresh D.	1

Q2 – Will Shelton defend his points? Mensik back to business?

Favourite: Shelton

Possible Dark Horse: Mensik

Performance in question: Khachanov, Ruud, Draper

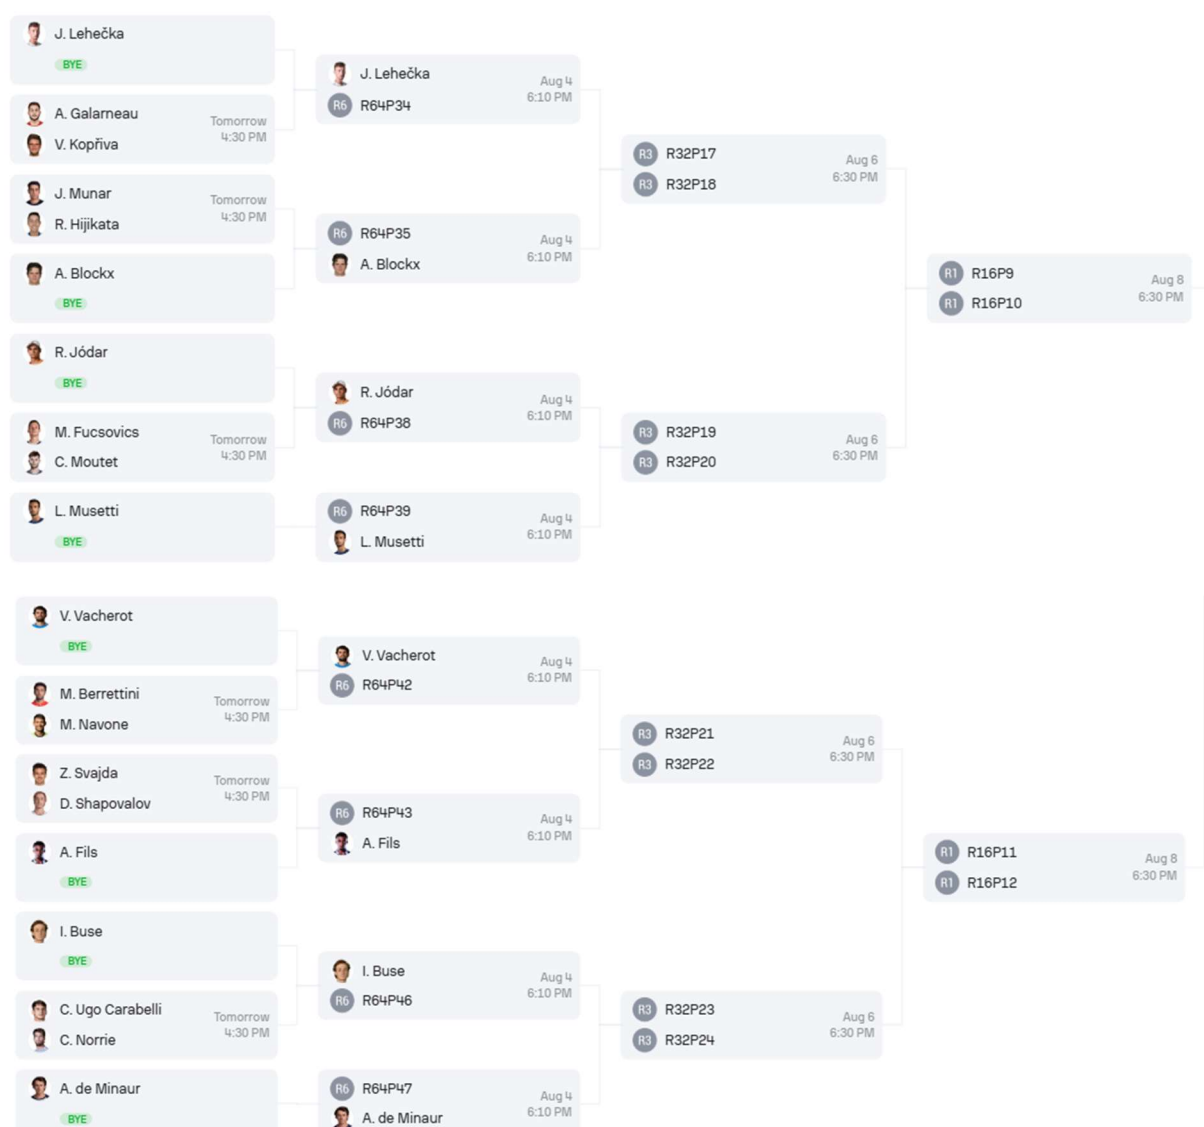

Player to defend Points: Shelton [Winner], Khachanov [Final]

This is a quite interests quarter, as we have Shelton, who should be obviously very motivated to defend his points here, but his performance still remains a questionmark, as the whole year has been a disappointment so far. Based on what we see here, he should be able to make it through the QF, as Ruud will probably not trouble him, Fonseca is 4:3 on hard this year, has little to no preparation for hard – looking to fade him against Ruud or Shelton.

Now what can we say about the top draw with Khachanov, Medvedev and Mensik? Well for Mensik, I am hoping that he gets back to his performance, he won Miami, is 16:7 on hard and these conditions should suite him honestly, as the speed and weather are almost the same. In R3, he should face Khachanov, odds should be around 1.55 (Calculated with my Model, available here) for Mensik – Maybe we can catch a 1.7-1.8 here, which I would take almost blindly. This could also be our Step 2 of our challenge

What to say about Medvedev? Nothing tbh.. His whole performance is a mystery. He is 19:5 on hardcourts this year but has not shown any good performance during the clay or grass season. He might be able to go through to the R4 against Mensik/Khachanov – I would neither bet or fade him until then.

Q3 – Completely Open Draw???

Favourite: Alex De Minaur

Possible Dark Horse: Jodar

Performance in question: Alex De Minaur, Fils

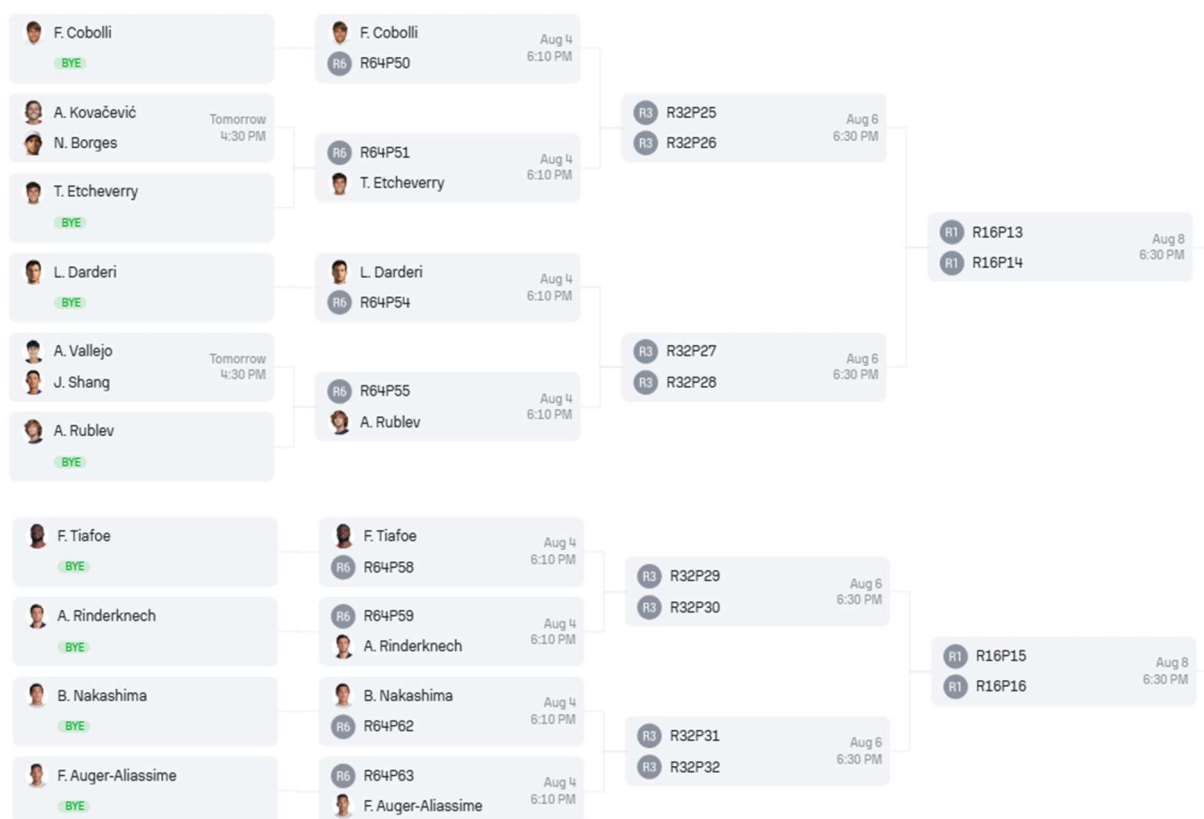

Player to defend Points: Alex De Minaur R4

Lots of potential in this Quarter. As I have already backed Jodar, I am very excited to see what he will bring here. Possibly going for the longshot here to win the quarter, minimum price is around 6.5/7 (Calculated with my Model, available here) or, more realistically, he should be able to make it through Lehecka and we would cover against De Minaur or I will be starting my challenge in his R2 matchup.

Other than that I would fade Fils, I don't really like his performance but logically, he should be able to make it through to the R4, where he will face ADM and maybe even beat him. But his performance is so inconsistent, I tend to fade him than to back.

Q4 – Here is where the money is made

Favourite: Tiafoe, Cobolli

Possible Dark Horse: Rublev

Performance in question: FAA, Darderi

Player to defend Points: Rublev [QF]

First sport that jumps into my eyes – Rublev vs Darderi – wow that matchup, combined with confirmed data, that would be a high liquidity sport. Rublev should be priced around an odd of 3 (Calculated with my Model, available here). Now Darderi will also have his first test against an challenger after retiring. But why am I excited about this spot? Last H2H was on clay, even Darderi's favourite surface and he lost 6-4 6-3 against Rublev. In addition to that, he retired his last game, so we cant gauge his level, but it won't be above the best Darderi we have seen this year, and he has one of the worst hard stats I have ever seen tbh. I will share the bet for my members here if my sources align with a full breakdown on the Bets.

Next up, we got FAA or “the choker”, who will get Nakashima in Round 3, where I will go against him, based on that he has no points to defend (second round exit). Nakashima should definitely bring heat to the game, I would lean toward winning a set or over 22.5 games, both should be at a fair price of 1.7/1.8, based on my model.

Based on my Preview I am looking to back following bets:

Michelsen to win against Humbert @1.8

Mensik to win against Khachanov @1.8

Jodar to win against Musetti @1.6

Jodar to win Quarter @6

Rublev to win against Darderi @3

Rublev to take a set against Darderi @1.8

Nakashima to win a set against FAA @1.8

Nakashima/FAA over 23.5 games @1.7

Possible Challenge Bets = 3 Bets at an Odd of 1.5 = 3x the stake

- ➔ Step 1: Mensik to win against Khachanov @1.8
- ➔ Step 2: Alex De Minaur to win against Norrie @1.4
- ➔ Step 3: Zverev to win against Fritz @1.4

Of course that can change, if we have new data and players are not confirming the performance that I am forecasting.

If you want to be a member with the newest picks, best value on the market and 95+ Tennis Betting education videos, checkout my whop community.